Emma

I received your essay last night. I was sorry to learn that your head ache still troubled you. I hope it would not affect you this week. I am afraid you have worked too hard. Sister per you seemed quite fresh and so visited on Monday morning & I was rejoiced to see it for I hope you will feel better this week.
I have just pumped out of bed to write you a bit more (I should tell you what time it is) for I heard Father speak of going to town pretty soon and I must hurry. Despite your opinion of your production I must say I am well pleased with much of it. I have not yet read it over but once and then quite hastily. I did not see any raveling, that time I will look for them next time. You must come up if possible on Sunday if we shall have such grand good times if you do. You may speak of me and act towards me just as you did last term when you came for Anna, Angie & self have concluded to frighten Cynthia out of her seven senses on that occasion. I have a request to ask of you, a horse for you to present which is the price of my writing at the present time.

I wish when you come up you would bring that book of Hedy which I gave you some time and that Oration on Poetry.

God bless I promised them a copy of the letter, and have not yet fulfilled my promise.

Angie has received a letter from Genesville and will doubtless go there in Sept. I think the situation will be a very good one though she will probably be obliged to work cheaply at first.

Yours in constant friendship
Alison

P. S. I don't believe Father is going to town soon so I have not all my hurry for I shall not go till evening and perhaps not then as I am somewhat hurried, and I suppose there will be no news done if I do not send it to you. The Programmes are carried away with set of them we have two you are to read first in the afternoon. It is said that Anna has a very poor production, Lucia told me so and she said last night it was the poorest one she had ever seen from her pen. I must go to work upon my Creative Affair
