Emma

I found on my return to day, everything just as expected, all topsy turvy, full of bricks, lime, plaster, shingles, nails and everything else pertinent to house fixing thick and plenty.
Plumbers, Carpenters, and painters will probably be household companions for the next week or two, and as Father will be away at this the lot will fall on you to take care of the finishing interests of a portion of the southern part of Kingsville. Now as he has hired some for harvest and the buying season I suppose I am in duty, say interest, bound to help him when he requires it, and as the harvest is ready, "I must begin immediately." It will therefore be necessary for me to spend the "Glorious Fourth" in swinging the Cradle instead of enjoying your society as expected.

As I have no wish to spoil your enjoyment of that day, I will send you this tomorrow that you may not expect me. Rosette appears fully to appreciate your gifts, for one steels before, and the other beside her, and while suscipitatory organs do ample justice to the one she says the other is "in pretty." She surely knows which to prefer but I guess her taste will lean to the side in favor of Millard.

I shall not express any thanks for them she must do that herself.
I shall direct this to George so that the blessing of Great Affair in Concord, may not get into his head to send it over to the Hooper, or any where else. I hope you will have a good time on Monday I expect one. There was something which I wished very much to say have forgotten what it is. Wait George be nicely disappointed when she gets this. Ha! Ha! I can but laugh to know she will receive the writing of the letter inside and then break a pen expecting a letter from you wille of course and find one directed to you. Wait it be just laugh for me on the would you? Yours truly

S. A. I will endeavor if possible please you to be at Cherry Grove on Saturday week. See volute and arrive in the afternoon.
 A. B. W.

Please give the sheet accompanying this to Jane. It contains the best information I can give her on the subject.
