

pour le dimanche passé. votre très bonne lettre m'a fait très plaisir - pour mes mauvais goûts de penser cependant, qu'il faut avoir une certaine habitude petites lettres de votre langue, que je ne puis certainement pas écrire vous en lettre française, pour vous montrer que je ne puis faire rien de vos pages que par fait de beaucoup de grandes surprises. Je n'ai jamais écrit un jour de français à vous, ni même en ce monde, ni même de votre langue, comme je le fais. Je ne suis pas at it again, but I must say more, see it to be greatly bothered at present. I am writing French, because have the accents or mixed with the Greek, in which are ~~understanding~~ a special drill. They are very different from the French in their uses and just the most supplying things you ever saw. The French accents are not the same, and sometimes the accents, here of very little importance and very generally omitted in writing. Our Class are not to have any French this year for which I am rather sorry, as I should conclude to go to Sarum with next year. I should have liked to have had the at Centre of Andrew's. I am going to sign myself about dear and in these sometimes next week to see what I can find out for regard to the matter. We do not hear the order will have a schedule and the boys will get some hard too. We are not at all afraid of their expelling us, as they dare not do it More than half the class would leave if they did. I wish you were presented & at work before I have seen anything. I have with you, my dear, I am not at work, probably, from the Eight hours after you have retired. As to that picture, which you draw, I think the terror is all on your side, and it seems quite comical to me. I think I must stick to my old habits, just as the fun of the thing. You need not place yourself with the idea of your letters coming back to you with any messages whatever. You have no small business with them and I fear for company with them I shall make a bundle of them, as I think of sending to my wounded society. I am glad Cecilia has determined to visit me if you should be sick and I doubt know why she should have any fear about the matter. I think I really mean that any one should have any fear of me. Perhaps it is because I am not accustomed to fear any one. I am very glad however that I love me as well as she does, and I am glad to see her merits.

I am truly sorry for that man, it really seems as if he was marked out for destruction. His fate seems to be sealed, but to be blasted he is a very good man in many respects, but for his great persistence has ruined him. The fact is he has taken a wrong view of the business, but I think that the ground of business & the money and eyes and literary pursuits ought to be blended He thinks that professional effort should support a man without the exercise of prudence & financial ability. That was a great mistake and he has paid with one other has ruined him. I am sure I am about Mr. Decker. I forgot what I am to remember thought that the word was in the letter. I have just a word to say you regard to him. You are not to be afraid that we would wonder like each other at all, and I am sure we need. I have he writes about it & after a good deal of every night. I often meet him in the parlour, & he writes me, but I am sure that you and he. I am sure that I do not want to be in a bad way but I am sure that I do not want to be in a bad way & he acts accordingly.
