Of course if we don't get to ~~hunting~~ you will not want to bring Sara I will let you know by telegraph if I do not decide by letter. I am much worried about it all and could not enjoy the service this morning because my mind would wander to it.

I don't like the title of the subscription book, or rather the part of it, "the strange adventures of a Northern man at the South since the war" It sounds too Robinson Cranford like. I hope you will get up something better. Yours letters come regular every night, but one then I had two the next. — You have been very good to write so regularly when you are so busy. — It has been very warm and bright today but the wind has come up now. Eddie has gone to bed with the three little children. — I enclose a little clip from the Tribune this morning or
