FORDS, HOWARD, & HULBERT,

No. 27 PARK PLACE,

(GOODS ENTRANCE: 24 MURRAY ST.),

New York, Sept 15 1881

Dear Judge,

Here goes your bank-
book & vouchers.

Glad you have read Plymouth Under; sorry you don't like it. "A woman wrote it" not!
So you are out a little; but you are right in your perception of its lacks. It might have been tinkered up if one's had time, or if the author had been nearer than the Rocky Mountains, which he was not. If you can't find some undiluted commendation to give it, ~~may~~ don't mention it. Allow it to trot along with what fresh we can give it. I don't expect great things of it, but it will do Something commensally, and sanctity for the Indians.

I am only awaiting the outcome of two drawings of White, just made for another book, to post Royal Gentleman through ~~the~~ a week.
By this time not much it will be well under way. I wish you could read some that copy of the Great South.
I am quite sure I could pick out one or two little things to tuck up Looni with, out of it. At all events, let me try.

In vain have I hunted through three big bundles of papers left by dear old Ed for to find the copies of Shamela & John Jay. I have written to his wife about them, & will send them on if I can get them.

Yours always
J.M.
