Dupleix's Mornay one of the chief supporters of Henry of Navarre at the battle of Coutras, after Henry had addressed the troops stepped out and told him how his excess had injured the Reformed cause especially his seduction of a young lady at Rochelle open and un-tornous of late - and urged him to confess and repent lest God should send defeat - Henry confessed whole army knelt in prayer and then on to action

October
1587

On the right stood Conde at the head of his men and with him Laissou - on the left was Turismon
While fair in the center shone Chevalry's star
The white crested Henry Bold King of Navarre -
Best braver and staunchest of all that array
Was the undaunted Bourgher Dupleix's Mornay

Ere the breath of the battle blew over the plain
And the meadows undrenched with the blood of the slain Remember cries Henry whose ^{children} rows you are and follow inferring the crest of Navarre
God send us a triumph unequalled today
Women cried the Bourgher Dupleix's Mornay

Then out from his place in the armament sprung
And laid on the ^{his} stern accents ringing
Remember thy sins at this moment Oh King - Bethink what disaster thy ^{sins} may bring Repent of thy ^{this} ^{vastness} and ^{press}
cried the undaunted Bourgher Dupleix's Mornay

Dupleixis Mornay.

Contents: October: 1587.

On the right stood Conde, at the head of his men
And with him Soisson - On the left was Turenne;
While fair in the center gleamed "Chivalry's Star"
"The white crest of Henry - "bold King of Navarre";
Yet bravest and staunchest of all that array
Was the undaunted burgher Dupleixis Mornay.

Even the breath of the battle blew over the plain
Even the meadows were drenched with the blood of the slain -

"Remember" - cried Henry - whom children yet are
And follow unfearing the crest of Navarre!
"God send us a triumph unequalled today!"
"Amen!" - cried the burgher, Dupleixis Mornay.

Then forth from the sacred battalions he sprang
And far o'er the valley his stern accents ring:
Remember they say, at this moment, O King!
Bethink what disaster they may bring Repent of thy errors this instant and pray!"
Cried the ^{of penitence} undaunted burgher, Dupleixis Mornay.

"Remember Soisson - the fair demoiselle
Deflowered and deserted in Burgundy's hall
Remember the shame of thy vicious life
To the curn which is staked on the gathering strife
Down! down in the dust my brow I mould and pray!"
Cried the undaunted hero Dupleixis Mornay.

Then down knell the King with his brave liegemen there
And all the vast host heard his penitential ^{prayer!}

Then treble a hero, each God-strengthened man
Followed ^{Prise after} over the white crest which shone in the sun

While ^{through} ~~was~~ beside it through all the willow fring
I mate the ^{arm of} ~~burgher~~ Duplessis Mornay

Three times ~~since~~ ^{since} their huts the ^{ears} ~~ears~~ of a century fled
Since the ^{of} ~~only~~ ^{run away with} ~~Contras~~ ^{battle=ooze} ~~with~~ ^{red}

And over it rose, with the sun's bright star,
The triumphal shout of the host of Navarre!

The Prince's white crest danced brightly today
But forgot is the burgher Duplessis Mornay!

The Prince's white crest lives in ^{an} ~~an~~ ^{unfading} ~~unfading~~ ^{lay} Forgot is God's hero - the burgher Mornay -

The King - he yet lives ^{shined in} ~~in~~ ^{unfading} ~~unfading~~ ^{lay} -
The King - he yet lives in the ^{poet's}

The King - he yet lives in the minstrel's bright lay!
~~Forgot~~ ^{Forgot} is ~~the~~ God's hero - Duplessis Mornay!

~~The Prince's white crest fills the minstrel's bright~~

The Prince's white crest comes in song - and today Forgot is God's hero - Duplessis Mornay!

~~Forgot~~ Who honors God's hero - the burgher Mornay!
