Dear Judge:-

I have just finished "Button's Run", and think it first rate, your own judgment to the contrary notwithstanding. Your mysteries baffle delightfully all the way through. The horrors are sufficiently "creepy". I liked the dog fight as a novelty, as well as in its effect upon Bobby. You have given me a familiar character well drawn for the first time in Dewetown, and no one has anticipated you, so far as I know, in the clear emphasis of that phase of American character that Agro showed in accepting Dewetown's invitation to ride. As one of the multitude I think it - The book - a very clever performance.

Remember me to your dearest and best, and believe me as every one who is proud to be your friend
