

FORDS, HOWARD, & HULBERT,
PUBLISHERS,
No. 80, Lafayette Place.

NEW YORK,

1890

Ha! Ha!! Ha!!!

"The man who makes two laugh,
where only one grew before, seems well of his country" - a word to that effect. If I laughed when I began to read the Chapter following Milton Kisha's
"Deliverance from Evil" you must have had a choking
time of it when you read my post-mortem Theological treatise of yesterday! I had actually forgotten the end of the book as I had read it before, and my only feeling was that M.K. had been "delivered" & death.

True ~~~~~

Well, I am up. It's "one or me "sure enough!"

You will observe from this that Mr. Turgie's package of Chapters XLV & XLVI came duly this morn'g. Please tell her so with my thanks.

Tomorrow is Election a legal holiday; do I suppose that perhaps by Wednesday the final chapter will be here, & no time lost, as every body & thing shuts up for Election.

It's a good story, I'd say, whether they read it or not. But I guess they will hang 'em, they shall!

JRM