

PROFIT SHARING

BETWEEN EMPLOYER AND EMPLOYEE.

BY NICHOLAS PAINE GILMAN.

This work, now in its third thousand, has met with very cordial recognition from the press, which is a unit in praising its fullness of information and its fairness of tone—the New York Tribune, for instance, saying that “the work may apparently be accepted with confidence as a faithful handbook of experience in profit sharing so far,” and the Chicago Tribune declaring, “we have at last a volume on the economic problem which students and practical men, whether employers or employed, can take up without prejudice and comprehend without difficulty.”

The two economists who may safely be called the highest authorities on labor questions in the United States have expressed their judgment of Mr. Gilman's book in letters, of which they kindly approve the publication.

“I think you have very successfully accomplished the work you undertook. You have given us a clear and complete account of all the experiments in Profit Sharing which have been made in Europe and America: the economic principles governing such arrangements between employer and employee are correctly stated in your work; and the practical difficulties besetting the application of those principles are fairly, temperately, and judiciously discussed.

Truly yours,

FRANCIS A. WALKER, Pres. Mass. Inst. Technology.”

“I have examined with very great pleasure your work on Profit Sharing. The few chapters which you gave me the liberty of reading in manuscript impressed me most deeply with the importance and completeness of your undertaking. The examination of your full work corroborates my first impression. You have made a great contribution to economic literature, and, I believe, have in addition to this done a service to your kind. A sensible understanding of the principles which underlie the system of profit sharing can result only in good; and your clear recital of the facts relating to various experiments in different countries, together with your argument, stamp your work as the very best that has appeared in the English language, while it is far more complete in its general construction than any that has appeared in any language.

I am sincerely yours,

CARROLL D. WRIGHT, U. S. Commissioner of Labor.”

One volume, crown 8vo, 460 pages. $1.75.

. Mailed, post-paid, on receipt of the price.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN AND CO., BOSTON.

11 EAST SEVENTEENTH STREET, NEW YORK.