January, 22nd, 1891.

My Dear Madam:--

I was very sorry indeed that I did not have the pleasure of meeting you when you called at my office some time ago, and I should have sooner acknowledged the copy of "Murvale Eastman," which you left for me, as well as your letter of January 9th, but I have been in the west and am just back.

I should like very much indeed to have some of Judge Tourgee's work in The Ladies' Home Journal, and I am certainly ready to give anything which comes from his pen a most favorable consideration. It is more a question of suitability than anything else, and if in his work he can adapt any article he may have at present in mind, to the constituency of The Journal I shall be very glad indeed. Believe me,

Very Cordially Yours,

Edward W. Bole
