That you would dispose of all foreign rights of the novel (both serial & book) for your own profit.
In the end we think you will be better pleased to have the business done as we propose, and you will not have to divide the profit. With kind regards to Judge Justice we remain,

Very truly yours

Gentlemen:

I have your letter of the - inst.
Acting on your advice, I will abandon the serial publication abroad.

It would be needless waste to set it up and reprint these in book-form.

If you will kindly sell me at a fair rate the unbound sheets and ~~arr-~~ range to let me have the last fair mail copies before the appearance of the binder containing the last instalment, I will arrange for the English publication on my own account.

I don't think there is much in the English market but I hate to leave men who make so much fuss about reprints coolly appropriate things themselves.

If you will let me know what you will charge for the sheets packed for shipment, I will know what I can do. Of course I do not expect you to put the sheets quite at cost but suppose you will ask only a fair profit on printing and handling, so there is no binding and you will have to make the plates any how.
