

Abston Highlands Mass
March 17th 1891.

Dear Judge Tourjii:

I have occasion to reprint, ^{with others,} a story of mine which came out in "Our Continent," and though Mr. Baylton thinks there can be no need of looking up assurance of copyright, under the circumstances he gave me your address that I might write you if I chose. Of course there is no question of my right to the story, but I always for former days take a formal line from each editor. Yours as ever, Elizabeth Street Philadelphia

P.S.

My little to the story was "too late."
You gave it some other — somebody's
"Decoration Day!"
