The Hon A. W. Lorangee,

Dear Judge,

You have always taken so much kind interest in my getting on that I thought it would be the thing for me to write you of my recent change in position. I left The Express this last week to go on The Enquirer which

I presume you have seen by this time.
I send you a copy
of yesterday's paper.
Every thing is not quite as it will be yet but things are running well and
in a few days more
we hope to be getting up a pretty good paper. I have a better position than I had on the Express, better
salary and work
more to my taste,

I have charge of the dramatic work, a line I have been giving some study and intend to give more, I assist the city editor some and what reporting I do I have considerable liberty about. I think the paper has come to stay, for some time at least, as there is said to be over a million in the estate which is behind it. At all events "nothing ventured nothing had."
