The Inter Ocean.

Chicago, November 28th, 1891.

Judge A. W. Tourgee,
Mayville, N. Y.

My Dear Judge;--

I received your letter asking about the circular to be issued in connection with the National Citizen's Rights Association at a time when Mr. Busbey was away from home, and I had his work added to mine. Intending to answer it promptly I laid it aside and let other things run over it, but reminded of it a few days later, and not having time for a letter I telegraphed you that we would publish the circular or pamphlet and for you to send on the matter. Not having heard from you since I began to think that you could not have received the dispatch, and I, therefore, write you. The readers of The Inter Ocean all knowing your personal address of course we hear little at this end, comparatively, in regard to the Bystander, nothing like we used to hear, but I can understand very well that they are attracting a good deal of attention. Have you given up the idea of publishing the pamphlet you referred to in your letter, or did my dispatch come too late that you had taken measures already for its publication elsewhere?

Very Truly Yours,
