

8805

Publishing House of

Funk & Wagnalls Company

30 Lafayette Place

ADVERTISING DEPARTMENT.

The Voice

8-page Weekly—
Exceeding 100,000.

The Homiletic Review

96-page Monthly Magazine—
20,000.

The Literary Digest

32-page Weekly—
17,000.

The Missionary Review

80-page Monthly Magazine—
Exceeding 11,500.

NEW YORK,

Aug. 28, 1895.

Albion W. Tourgee, Esq.,

Mayville, N. Y.

Dear Sir,—

We have your letter of August 24th, enclosing your check for $32.00 in payment of advertising account in the Homiletic Review, and we beg to make the following explanation of your having received draft and letter at the same time.

Your first communication, proposing a settlement of the account by exchange advertising, was received during the vacation of the writer, as advertising manager, but was replied to immediately on his return. Without his knowledge, the accounting department mailed a draft along with the two or three hundred others, and in conformity with a regular practice each month. There is nothing exceptional or personal whatever in your having received the draft, and we trust you will overlook any apparent urgency on our part regarding the settlement of the little account.

We thank you for the remittance enclosed in your last letter, and would only add that it will give us great pleasure to have any further orders from you at any time, and to give them our best care and attention. Regretting that you were annoyed at all in the matter, we remain,

Humbly yours,

Funk & Wagnalls Co.
Geo. Ewan