perhaps, it have a clasp in the bottom reached about I know the way inward.

I have been to Lebanon, near Hartford about the first, and saw several some of the best in the country.

I think it is a mistake to young men, sending letters in either the office or the post office, but you will be better off if you send them through the post office.

It is in my letter, as I think it is possible to have been a mistake in the letter, but I will not write any more to you, but I will be very glad to see you, for I have a special letter to you from the Boston office, I am very yours,
J. S. [unclear]

I am
yours,

to excuse that scribble of a letter was in my mind and I did think that was not well but you and Lizzy read had a real grand one it.

Oh well, you are a funny Darling I presume that letter should have made some grand picture but it did not one in the least, though I was sick the day it came. It was a Sunday I had been feeling almost sick all day and when evening came I was quite down. I undressed and Ellen had been rocking and putting me to bed and said until the mail came for she was sure I would read some letter I had not expected one from you very sincerely though I did want one very badly. It was quite late before the mail was brought and in a minute I heard the patter of little feet on the stairs, sure several letters for either Ellen or I. I had a letter unexpected though it was. I was sure glad you was happy even if I did receive such a comforting letter from you when I was sick and down.

Shall I tell you, my precious Darling, what my heart is like now? I don't know if a hardy plant, accustomed to outdoor life, with winds and storms, is removed and now shielded carefully in sheltered quarters all exposure, it soon would become very unlike what it had been, and then every rough wind would take from it vigor and life, and long exposure would soon destroy it entirely. Well, well, love, Emma's heart would be just like this. Many things which a year or two ago would not have the least effect on one, that I would not even notice, I do now. I can tell you you are reason, therefore only that I have been so much a wife.

I had a letter from Lizzy last night a nice sweet one, of course. Why did you not tell me more about your visit

... I would be almost obliged to answer with a "no" and ... that did return while about his visit.
