Mr. Toussaint,

Would you smile or would you frown
If you knew a pretty girl,
With hair of golden brown,
And lips of rosy red,
With dove's eye gently glancing,
With a fair and thoughtful brow,
And those eyes all brightly dancing
Were thinking of you now?

Would you smile or would you frown
If her lips of rose are bright,
And her voice all sweet and low,
Should I write in what I write,
I love you oh I love you
For your heart is true and true,
And your glance is like the eagle,
I have hearts and could I long.

If her heart lit smile was bountiful,
And her lips all red and small,
And her words like dropping honey,
Had a soft and soothing fall,
Would you answer to this wooing?
Would it all your care bequile?
Would you answer to this wooing,
With a frown or with a smile?

Your faithful Valentine.
