Brien Heater Company,
Westfield, Mass.

Gentlemen:

Thanks for your letter in answer to mine of recent date.

I am sending by freight to-day, the broken piece of grate to your Company. It has been examined by several experts who unhesitatingly declare it to have been a defective piece of casting--one that should never have been put into a Heater, being hollow. The furnace in which this grate was used has only been in use about 10 months, has never had a good draft and consequently has not been subject to excessive heat. It has not used nearly as much coal as the other furnace because of the lack of draft and it is often difficult to keep any fire going at all in a heavy atmosphere. So this grate has not been worn out by excessive heat or long use. It is simply defective and I should certainly not be charged with its cost as the original was one which should never have been sent me.

I have examined the ash bin and find in it no waste of coal. I have also minutely questioned the man who has had the care of these furnaces ever since they were placed in my house. He informs me that the ash boxes have been emptied every morning--never having missed a single one--that there has been no carelessness as far as he knew from following the directions pasted up on a beam by each furnace; that he cleaned them all out when there was no need of fire last spring exactly as the directions said. Yet with all this care we will have burned over 40 tons of coal before the season is over, and have had an unusually mild winter--only once below zero!
