Dear Sir:

I am sending you by some mail, a book written by my husband and published some 20 years ago, entitled "With Gauge & Swallow, Attorneys". It has been out of print some 12 years, and we are desirous of getting out a new edition of it. The thought has occurred to me that as a new generation has become lawyers since this book was published "The Green Bag" might be induced to re-publish these stories serially, each one being complete in itself but all hung together at the end by a thread running through them all. They might prove an attractive feature to the younger portion of the bar--possibly also to the older members. An eminent lawyer of Buffalo has just written me that he thought this book one of the best of Judge Tourgee's stories, and that a new edition would be very popular.

My idea is this: To offer these stories to "The Green Bag" at $10. each--there are 13 of them--and have the publishers of this periodical put out the new edition.

You can read the stories and report to me on my suggestion at your convenience.

I am, Sir,

Very truly yours,
