Gentlemen:

I have your favor of yesterday and am sending a copy of "An Outing with the Queen of Hearts", by registered mail.

It is the only copy I have and very precious to me as it was the one my husband always kept with other books, favorites of his, in a little desk in his "Den". You will note the little quotation he had put in it, which if a new edition were put out would go nicely on a title page. The little verse at the end of the volume was put in by him when he knew that he must leave me. You will readily see how dear this little book is to me in this and also the sweet tribute he gives me all through the book--as all this is veritable history. I thought I would send it now and if you do not return it before going to Europe, you will keep it safely for me.

It has always seemed to me that this little volume is worthy of becoming a classic, and if well put out and advertised would have a large sale. The Judge was always much annoyed at the paper used and the cover of the binding by Merrill & Baker. I trust if you consider it worth putting out again these defects will be remedied.

I am, gentlemen,

Very truly yours,

E. F. J.
