Mrs. E. K. Tourgee,
Mayville, N. Y.

Dear Mrs. Tourgee:-

Anything in the way of reminiscences is not possible for the present at least with our Sunday Magazine, but I am inclined to think that anything so readable and interesting as this Buffalo clipping might easily find a market in newspaper syndication.

One of the largest syndicates in this line is that of Joseph B. Bowles, Room 713 Oxford Building, 84 La Salle St. Chicago, Ill. Mr. Bowles is an upright, straightforward and trustworthy young man, and you would be fortunate indeed if he thought so well of your material that he would undertake its syndication.

Then, too, there is the McClure Newspaper Syndicate, out of which McClure's Magazine sprung years ago, located at 44 East 23rd Street, New York City, and conducted by Mr. T. C. McClure.

Another reliable newspaper syndicate is W. G. Chapman, of the International Press Bureau, 88 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

As I read through your most interesting memoirs of the campaign of 1860, it struck me that something along this line might please the Atlantic Monthly.

Mr. Bowles is selling some Sunday Magazine material. I have known him for many years. Should you conclude to write him the mention of my name will do you no harm.

I am returning the clippings as you may need them for Mr. Bowles or someone else.

With best wishes, as ever,

Very truly yours,

Wm A Taylor
