

Watfield, New York.

My dear Miss Tongue:-

I feel that the thanks of the Monday Club of Watfield are due you - a large degree for the charming picture you gave us of your talented father. You brought him so vividly before us as the man, as the soldier, as the man of affairs, and above all as the writer, that we are greatly in your debt.

I feel very sorry that there was anything else on the program for the afternoon, as it would have been a great pleasure if it had been possible to have listened much longer, and this is only once the sentiments of the whole club. I heard Mrs Thorp (who was Annie Youngfellow) do the same for her father, but she did not succeed as well as you in placing a living personality before us. Of all your many lecture engagements are as successful as this, I am inclined to envy your hearers.

Thanking you again
for your great kindness and for the pleasure
you gave to us all
I am

Most sincerely yours
Elizabeth N. Turner
