Dear Mrs. Tourgee:

In answer to your favor of the 17th I am sorry to say that I have no knowledge or acquaintance with Donahue, Chicago.

My impression is that he has a large printing plant and issues cheap paper covered books; but he may have a general line.

Some one may have borrowed the title & fitted it to another story or imitated the title. I am glad to hear that you renewed the copyright.

I shall be interested to know what you find out.

A copyright covers the text of a book, not its title - thus there are now more than one Webster's Dictionary, but if a fraud is committed in the use of a title I suppose it is punishable.

Yours truly,
Geo. S. Hulbert
