Dearest;

It is quite a clear
day now though it
showed hard this morning. Carrie came in yesterday and brought me a perfectly lovely Ansel cake. She seemed quite proud of it.

I had an average
night - but quite a crise
after waking up:
The shooting pains &
the dreadful feeling
all over are de-
sidedly less, but in revenge the pain will select a place to
settle down a gnaw,
until we drive it

away with heat & applications, then it goes on to the next place. My appetite is also slightly improved.

Hours of Sunday
came this a. m.

My hand is too cramped to write more. This is just to say that I love you,
dear.
