Dear Mrs. Tourgee:

Upon a three week's absence in the west I came home via Buffalo and spent Saturday & Sunday with my family arriving here Monday morning found your friendly letter of May 16th. It was my intention to answer it as soon as I caught up with my work and to acknowledge your courteous invitation to visit you at Hotkiss, which I shall be happy to do some day.

Now comes your inquiry about Young Arthur R. Howard. I have just phoned to Doubleday, Page & Co. and waited a half hour for investigation, asking them to inquire in their several departments; but so far, they do not run upon any clue to his identity & they do not know of such a person. I have asked them to go through all their list of agents. If the young man is a crook his name was probably assumed.

I will communicate the facts to J. R. H.
Perhaps he can throw light on the subject.
If not, we can appeal to the Ex-President
