My dear Mrs. Tourgee:-

I can quite appreciate what you wrote me in your letter of last Friday on a confidential subject. You certainly have not the infirmities you mention, that are frequently met with in some people of the very best intentions and character. I note the vigor of your matter, as well as the firmness of your handwriting, and I trust that this means that you have had a good winter, and that you are feeling quite like yourself again.

I wish I could get away for a day, to come up and see you, but I am alone in the office, with rather more than I can do, this week, and next week I expect to be away again during the most, if not all, of the week. Between the Twentieth Century Club and the Women's Union, Mrs. Moot is as bad off as I am. If we ever get into a little better state of affairs, so that we could really see and entertain our friends, could you make us a visit, or would you prefer to have us make you one? I always feel that you are a woman of more than common distinction on your own account, and not merely the widow of a man who was really a statesman, who did not come into his own because he had too much courage for his time.

Sincerely yours,

To

Mrs. Emma K. Tourgee,
Mayville, N. Y.
