10940

~~entire exposition~~ narrative of facts made by

Testimony is the ~~statement~~ of facts, designed to be a witness in a judicial proceeding, and designed for use used as evidence, by a witness.

as evidence -

Evidence is such a statements of fact, as may be used in accordance with technical rules, in support of any hypothesis arising in any judicial proceeding.

(All that a witness says under examination is testimony; only such parts as are relevant and of which he is competent to speak are evidence.

Proof is the effect produced by evidence such as either presumptive, prima facie or conclusive Evidence, in its broadest sense, is the statement logically, or enunciation of any fact which tends to support any hypothesis or conclusion.

Evidence, in its legal sense, is any statement of fact which may be made, in accordance with technical rules, in support of any hypothesis or conclusion, arising in any ~~legal~~ proceeding in a court of Justice.

Testimony is the statement of a fact as evidence, by a witness-

Proof is the result or effect of testimony-

CHAUTAUQUA COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY 2013

These three terms are often confounded in legal works as well as at the bar. We hear and read of both parole testimony, parole evidence and parole proof as applied to precisely the same thing, and from this almost unavoidable ambiguity great confusion has resulted and much of the uncertainty and difficulty of the law of Evidence. A moment's consideration will show that the distinction taken above, is very far from being fanciful. Testimony, derivatively, signifies, the statement of a witness. Evidence (from E and video) that which shows, makes plain, discloses. Proof has never been held to have any other significance than that attributed to it except when used inadvertently —

Definitions &
Evidence
Testimony
and Proof —

Evidence, in its broadest sense, is any statement or enunciation of a fact which in any manner tends to support any hypothesis.

Evidence, in its technical legal sense is any statement of fact which may be made in accordance with technical rules, in support of any inference or legal conclusion.

CHAUTAUQUA COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY 2013