For

The lowest and most expeditious court, so called from the dusty feet of the suitors.
 The crowded thoroughfare beside
 Before the city's gate
 Where all its busy paths divide,
 The judge of Israel sat,
 A favored man of godly pride,
 Who wicket roads and made
 Unhindered came the rich and poor
 Before the judgment seat.
 And there found judgment quick and sure,
 And reparation meet.
 For judged was every evil-doer,
 Ere dust fell from his feet.
 And if, by chance, by chance
 When wayfarers did meet,
 And one, or both, appealed to blows,
 From "altercation sweet"
 Judgment was rendered ere the foe,
 Had wiped their dusty feet.
 When the two parties met
 To meet the storm in the land,
 Stern judgment did they meet.
 For Justice ruled with steady hand,
 The Court of Dusty Feet.
 When that hisignity
 The Court of Dusty Feet
 And so, along Life's thoroughfare,
 Amid the dust and noise,
 Through Gory and Sorrow, Till had Care,
 They met Victory and Peace,
 The Court of Dusty Feet
 When Life's journey long,
 Our footsteps shall complete,
 We pass the unseen barrier strong,
 And never may retreat,
 We wait God's judgment of our wrong,
 With Earth-Dust on our feet.
