Dear Sir

I beg to intrude on you long enough for a shake hand, for your admirable letter to the 105th Ohio. It is an enormous relief to a heart filled with righteous wrath but incapable of adequate expression to hear some more vocal brother give out a blast like that. It made me feel warm and comfortable all day. I thank you most cordially for my personal share in the satisfaction it has produced among the old-fashioned Union men who have not yet learned the new trick of anemic indifference which seems so popular with the literary folk for the moment.

Yours faithfully

Oliver Hay
