Huntingdon, Pa., Nov 30 1887.

My dear wife:

Reached here all right and such your letter. Am afraid you are not well and am troubled about you. Cannot imagine where the pocket-book is but presume it is on your table. The fun of it is my detail is carefully closed away in it. I can manage through - I know it is Coington and that is enough for one time. I doubt about getting back on Saturday, presume I may have to come down on the N.Y. P. & O., on Sunday, from Cleveland to escape a broken night. -

Had a very pleasant time at Chambersburg. This seems to be a miserable, dirty little hole out of which I cannot get until tomorrow morning,
unless I go back to the junction and take an midnight train. Think I shall have to do that.
Must go at once and see.

Good bye
Albion.

I hope Oscar has got into "scots" again and that you are in comfort
our ever,

Yrs
