My dear wife:

Arrived at 12. oc.

Found note from McClure who says he will call this evening with Currell's man. Hattie writes that she has been visiting in Brooklyn for a week and goes home on Thursday. Henry says he is coming to dinner. I am going to bed -

I'm packing my trunk & find that the manuscript of letters to a King was carelessly left out. You can guess how pleasant it is to find my work constant. Don't know what I will do, I hate to waste my time and going back and forth just for looks of a little cure.
