"THE AMERICAN," 180-182 MONROE ST.,
CHICAGO, ILL.

CHICAGO, Feb. 15th, 1907

Judge A. W. Tourgee,

Mayville,

N. Y.

Dear Sir:- After considering the offer made to you six articles at $125.00 each, for ~~each of the six articles of $125.00,~~ and which you declined, we have decided that we can not afford at the present time to take so many articles from you at that price. We have no doubt that your name and work to this extent would be worth $750.00 to "THE AMERICAN", but at the present stage of our enterprise we do not feel that we can afford it. We renew our former suggestion, that, if at any time you should have ideas for single articles, that could not be worked up into a series, we are prepared to negotiate for such single articles, paying you for them as good a price as you can get any where and possibly a little better. Although you say that you never publish single articles an idea may occur to you at some time, which will induce you to depart from your ruling; in that case please remember us. We trust that our correspondence has not been an inconvenience to you, and remain,

Yours Very Respectfully,

The Am. Pub. Co.
