HON. ALBION W. TOURGEE

Was born in Ohio in 1838, and educated in the University of Rochester. He served in the Union Army and was twice wounded. After the war he settled in North Carolina, where in 1868 he became Judge of the Superior Court. Out of his terrible experiences here with the Ku-Klux came that wonderful American Novel "A Fool's Errand" soon followed by that famous series of American Novels in which the inner political history of the country is so ably set forth.

Judge Tourgee is the patriotic novelist par excellence of this country, and one of its most popular platform orators, drawing large houses at high prices. But nowhere is he more happy or more impressive than when in political speech. He is one of the most earnest of Republicans for he has been where it tried a man's soul and imperilled his life to be a Republican.
