Jan. 19. 1889.

2 P.M.

My dear wife: I am here writing to you over to Berlin at 6 oc. feeling very tired, blue and generally used up.

I shall have to stay at Berlin over Sunday and have sharp work to make Janesville on Monday night.

I do not know whether this letter will start before Monday or not. I shall try and get into Chicago after the lecture at Belvidere but have not determined whether it can be done. I am now worried at having to write the day here and so write it all the more anxiously. I am not feeling so well however and don't know why - Love bless you

Albion.

I got home some specimens yesterday.
