My dear wife: I have been here four hours and have not yet got my mail. The darned woman has lugged it off and it will probably be right before I get it. I am about as well as one gets but that is all I can do about it. Dr Vincent is here and I have been chatting with him while waiting to get hold of my letters. Dr Martin whose family we knew in Denver is the Superintendent of the hotel, his son-in-law Mr. Hill being the owner. I have had a pleasant visit from him and am very comfortably located in consequence of our old acquaintance. By the way, I don't remember him at all any more than if I had never seen him nor his wife nor daughter's either though they all seem they know me and are acquainted with you.

Possibly I made a mistake sending the money to Mayville but the time was so short I was afraid you would not get it soon enough and thought you could check on my telegram and so make it all right.

This will not reach you of course but I will bite it off and you may get it Friday. A pleasant journey and much happiness to the both
