Dear Sir,

Your reply to my two former letters to hand. You have doubtless ere this received my last. It is true the public were interested in Postales. It is true you gave more matter than you promised, & we gave more to our readers than we promised & that neither were enabled to be benefited by the increase, not planning for it before. But it is now true that the public do not feel kindly towards the matter. They feel imposed upon & we feel in the same way. You have not ~~for~~ written a complete story. Better, far better, had it short & complete, than to leave it in this way. As I said before, it will so affect us for next Fall that I dare not go ahead as planned, & must ask release, paying what is right if it is right I should pay anything.

Yours truly
H. S. Harrison.
