My Darling:

I arrived here at 7 a.m., and found your charming letters awaiting me. I have read them over about half a dozen times each time finding some new cause of happiness. I am not exactly well today - a touch of the former trouble ~~to~~ but am not exactly sick and for once have thoroughly enjoyable quarters at the Plankinton. They put me into a little men room as usual, but after breakfast the clerk came up - very humble for a clerk - and said that Mr. White happened to see my name on the register and told him to give me a good room at once and apologize for putting me where I had. As a result I have a room which is very sumptuous and delightful. It makes me almost willing to be misapprehended to think that I can lounge about it all day long at my own sweet will.

It is a beautiful day and I have an idea which I am going to try and work out. It may not amount to anything so I will not tell you what it is. So long as there is a likelihood of its being still-born, it is as well not to raise untimely hopes.

I am very glad you like No. X. now, I thought there was good material in it but somehow could not get it into shape at first. I think XI + XII follow nicely and are in themselves very good.

The book, I hardly know what it will be like — cannot see it somehow as a whole, at all. It impresses me in some way that it ought to come out before "Puctolus" does. What do you think about it?

I have not yet heard whether I am to go to Cedar Falls as yet. If I do I don't think I can see the towners at all. If I do not I can possibly do it but am not likely to try it as it will make me late into St Paul where I especially desire to be fresh. Dubuque is a little hard to get to without losing time.

I am glad Leticia is so well and live over and over in my mind all your pleasures and her brave efforts. I get troubled about her sometimes not from fear she will not do enough but that she should attempt too much. She is a brave unselfish darling.

I will send further $100 tomorrow as soon as I am sure of the money to-morrow night, and you can keep the other Hoppinott checks. I enclose to you lest I should forget it, an "Alliance" no 2
