Dear Sir;

Pardon the slip whereby we addressed you again as "Prof." It is most natural to do so when that title is so generally applies by others as in case of yourself; but certainly we meant no harm. If we were printing a magazine we should like to use your articles enclosed but they are too elaborate for ~~our use~~. There is almost as much objection on the score of length even now that the paper is divided for we avoid continued articles almost strictly; never print them except with the very strongest reasons. If this were put into one article of not more than ~~th~~ eighteen hundred words we should be glad to print it. But you will say that could not be done, and of course it could not and save all the points which you make and which you doubtless feel to be essential to an adequate discussion of the subject.

We are sorry to return ^{the paper} again but no other course seems to be open to us. We should be glad to print from your pen but it must be adapted to the newspaper column rather than the magazine.

Yours Respectfully;

W. L. Gannett
