TESTIMONIALS.

From the Hon. SAMUEL F. MILLER, Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. Washington, October, 1888.

To THE BLACKSTONE PUBLISHING CO.:

I received your letter on the 2d inst., and also the volumes of your Text Book Series, so far as published, for which I am much obliged.

I consider this form of publishing law books as really more serviceable to the legal profession, and to all who purchase law books, than the endless expense of new text books, on the same subjects, by immature lawyers, and unpracticed writers, whose only qualifications are the desire for pay and the orders of a publisher.

But, the re-publication, in good style, of the standard works of approved value, which is the feature of your series, stands on different and much more commendable ground. Very respectfully, SAMUEL F. MILLER.

Boston, Mass., September 1, 1887.

I thank you for the copy of the reprint of the eighth edition of Taylor on Evidence, which you sent to me on my subscription to the Text Book Series.

The first edition was published in 1848. I have made constant use of this and each successive edition. * * * It is now universally regarded by the legal profession as the standard work on Evidence. It is founded on Greenleaf on Evidence, the first edition of which was published in 1842. The author says in his preface that he has "adopted with but few alterations his excellent general arrangement and followed to a considerable extent the course even of his sections and borrowed many pages of his terse and luminous writing." The author has scrupulously referred in the notes to those portions of Greenleaf of which he has availed himself. Judge Taylor has exhibited great assiduity and research in collecting, examining and sifting the cases which can, so to speak, be looked at from an evidence point of view. In no sense can his book be said to be a mere index to works of authority, a criticism which is often and truly made of text books; but it is a clear, full and exact statement of the Law of Evidence, by an accomplished legal writer. Indeed, it has been well said, "it is a work that conveys most technical instruction in a style which has all the charm of a romance."

A good index adds the greatest possible value to any book, and having had occasion to make practical use of it, I know that the index to this book is excellent. FRANKLIN FISKE HEARD, 6 Ashburton Place.

BLACKSTONE PUBLISHING Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

DEAR SIRS:—I have examined all of your books for the last year with care, and the list embraces some of the most scholarly books in the hands of the profession. And the scattering of such books broadcast over the country cannot help but broaden and liberalize the legal thought of the profession.

Your company is conferring, by the publication of these books upon the profession and the community at large, a benefit far beyond what you now imagine.

Believing what I have said and desiring to sustain those who had the courage to inaugurate such an enterprise, I sent you my subscription, and now return to you my best wishes for your continued success.

Very truly yours,

JAMES H. McDONALD.

To THE BLACKSTONE PUBLISHING Co.:

I commend your Text Book Series as a most valuable publication. To the Bench, the Bar and the Student I know of no issue of a law series of more general service.

I have derived much aid from its use in my judicial duties, and I am satisfied from my own experience that others engaged in the study and practice of the law will find no addition to their library of more value than the Text Book Series. Truly yours, CHRISTOPHER MAGEE.
