Dear Sir:--

I acknowledge receipt of your favor, and I regret that you are dissatisfied with my service. The clerk who has charge of sending away your notices tells me, that you have complained about duplicates before.

Many of my clients are anxious to receive everything, whenever their name appears. If clients do not desire these duplicates, they generally inform me of the fact, it is carefully noted on their account, and they get exactly what they desire.

It is possible that you have lately received more duplicates than ever, but it is greatly due to the increase of my business, and to the enormous number of newspapers I now receive; 12000 copies per week.

I have sent you up to date, 110 notices of a new series, and enclose two more, and if you like to favor me again with an order, I can assure you that you will not receive so many duplicates, and I will allow you a reasonable number for the many reprints ~~sent~~ I remain, Dear Sir,

Yours faithfully,
