Dear Sir,

The matter to hand this morning. It has been of course quite an inconvenience, but has not happened before. As for the remaining installments will be as before early the week preceding date of issue. As we had been obliged to omit from one or two issues, we disliked to do so any more if it could be helped.

That of this week is wrongly numbered & we hesitated whether to defer a week & ascertain if it was an error of numbering or of chapter sect, or to go ahead & simply change number. As the matter seemed in natural order we chose the latter course. We have taken the liberty to keep out a portion of this chapter, irrelevant to the story as story, though doubtless of some importance to you in carrying out your more fully your caricature.

We inserted unwillingly rather some things in previous chapters that were likely to give a wrong impression, & the complaints because of allowing them together with sense of justice even in our stars, leads us to hold back these pages. We will return that you may have them if you desire in the book published.

Please bear in mind that this spirit of intolerance you proclaim as right is but a man of straw. It does not exist. There is all the difference in the world between the spirit of the olden times which runs in the Catholic Church, or the Episcopal, or the Puritan days even when they gave no place on the earth to any holding diverse views, & that of the present day which merely excludes from a certain organization but allows the fullest liberty of thought and action in another circle or organization.

A Republican belongs in Republican ranks not in Democratic. An Infidel in an Infidel Club not in a Christian organization. A Universalist should go to & be with that body & not attempt to stray in the ranks of an organization formed for holding opposite views. There is no intolerance, no martyrdom in holding that while there shall be a place for every man, there should also be found every man in his place.

Yours truly
H. S. Harrison.
