Dear Sir,

I making the following request I feel a sense of delicacy, knowing your business and the probable amount of work which you have at hand. I will make a plain statement to you. Am a junior in Cornell College, Iowa, and am financially embarrassed. Now I do not desire a loan but would like to secure your services as a lecturer for one evening some time in April or May. Your works are very popular among the students and am sure you would have a large and appreciative audience. I am working my way through college and desire very much to finish with my class next year.

C. T. Brown, President.

H. E. Kepler, Secretary.

CORNELL COLLEGE,

In granting this request you will confer a favor and receive the fervid thanks of a grateful student after knowledge. Please be kind enough to give this serious consideration and judge upon the merits of the case. Please answer soon, stating what compensation, if any you would expect ~~at~~ if you come.

Respy Yours
