My Dear Sir:-

At the risk of becoming a nuisance I am going to write to you once more in regard to your promised article. You know you were to send it before you went to the Minneapolis Convention, but I presume it was not finished, and hope I may look for it in the very near future. In case you are very busy I can wait until the 20th for it if necessary, but would like it at the very earliest day possible. I have sort of relied upon having it for my July number, otherwise I would not write you again regarding it. Pardon me if I seem too persistent.

Very truly yours,

(Dictated.)
