

Orin, March 9, 1893.

Sunday. P. M.

My dear Emma:

When do you need the money I am to send for the Brooks' place? Shall I have the draft made in Jesse Brooks' favor or to Albion order, or yours - Please direct me in the matter. Might it not prevent possible worry in the future to have the deed made <sup>out</sup> to me? I can pay $50.<sup>00</sup> more on 6th of May or rather mail it the 6th. Do you want me to do so?

Did Albion go west on a lecture trip? I hope he will not take another cold and so bring on his cough again. What is the prospect of his writing a sequel to the story? Judging from the number of installments already published there cannot be more than two or three more, and it seems to me that the hero can not stop with all his knowledge with making one voyage to the new world. I hope he will tell of more discoveries.

I have finished the Afghan for Marcus, put it into a box lined throughout with sheet-lead, ready for shipment to-morrow. I send with it a set of embroidered dresser doyleys for Mrs. Phoebe. Mrs. Clark did them and they are very lovely. Marcus' sister said I must not pay the express charges, as the box would not be so sure of reaching its destination, should I do so. — So the box starts off without farther outlay at present —

I learned yesterday that Donna had returned from Fredonia — so should you feel disposed to act on my suggestion — it is too late now

I have employed a woman who calls herself a magnetic healer, to rub my hip, an hour at a time, three days in the week. she pinches and pounds, rubs and pulls, and if there be virtue in such treatment my walking will be much improved. Mrs. Russell who had not seen me <sup>since before the holidays</sup> except at church, thought when I was there that I had improved very much in the interim. I've had only three treatments as yet and do not notice any special effect as yet. though I've thought for a month or more I was pushing the muscles out and the leg did not seem quite so stiff as heretofore. Is there anything special I can get mother for birthday — Good bye —
Love to all — Affectionately
Angie