May, 12, 1893.

Dear Mrs. Turgie,

The collection of Indian curios I have been gathering for your daughter is nearly completed,

I have been a long time at it, but for a while it seemed impossible to get any thing worth having, as every thing was taken for the "World's Fair".

The variety of baskets is not yet what I wanted, but I may be able to get others before sending the things.

The pottery is quite nice, and I think to pack all the things in a barrel, with excelsior, is the best way.

Shall I send them by freight or express? And is the address on the barrel, to be Mayville, New York?

We will leave here the last of June, not to return, so if there is any thing I can do for you before leaving, let me know, and I will be glad to make the effort, whether I am successful or not.

Very respectfully,

Amelia R. Collins
