Dear Sir,

Ambler, Pa. May 15th. 1894.

As so very many members of your profession suffer with nervous headache as the result - shall we say the price - of the continuous mental work necessary to master the most intricate details of the case in hand such labor, however exhausting, being essential to success, we take the liberty of again drawing attention to the great relief afforded by Bromo-Caffeine, as a rest remedy when you are so completely "fagged out" by prolonged mental strain. In jury trials, the mental labor exerted in extracting evidence from ignorant or unwilling witnesses, the close study required to "hunt up" authorities to substantiate the position assumed in different cases, both are frequently so mentally exhausting as to require a brain stimulant in order to prevent headache with consequent depressed nervous force. This is obviated by one or two full doses of Bromo-Caffeine.

An advocate lacking in nerve force is pretty certain to lose his case, in jury trials. In examining titles to property, the labor of "running" the same ^{and} annoyance caused by finding no reference to previous conveyances is very fatiguing to nerve energy.

It is hurry and worry that kills. The attendant of both is headache. Prolonged mental strain results in "Brain-Fag", nervous prostration and ultimate break down, Bromo-Caffeine is a conservator of energy and its use prevents this. Teachers, Clergymen, Inventors, Architects, Professional men everywhere, depend upon Bromo-Caffeine as an aid to enable them to accomplish an immense amount of brain work which could not otherwise be done. ^{Certainly} not in the same time. The close analysis of difficult legal points, the exhaustion of protracted argument, the hurry and thought concentration of a large business are all pretty sure to result in headache, Bromo-Caffeine will relieve it.

Respectfully,
re.
