Why can our school not have a teachers' agency in itself. Members of our alumni and friends of our school hearing of vacancies should send them in to be filled through our faculty by other members out of positions. We hope such plans may be formed in the near future.

Let no member of our alumni forget that this is the quarter-centennial anniversary of our school. Each one it is hoped, will be present. Under directions of President James McGraw and the alumni committee elaborate provisions are being made for a good time. It should be a time long remembered.

With this issue some changes will be made in the management of the LEADER. The place of Miss Anna Nourse, Agonian editor will hereafter be filled by Miss Cora B. Rutherford and Miss Grace Markham, Alpha Delta business manager; Miss Jennie Bidleman. Mr. Boutwell's place will be filled at the end of the school year by Rob't Wilcox. The others have been re-elected. The outgoing members have done some hard and efficient work on the paper.

The Time Draws Near.

IT will be but a short time before we shall say our "good byes" as a school to the class of '94; they to go forth into the world to win honorable and useful places for themselves, and we to remain at our studies, biding the time when we too shall enter into life's struggle, each one for himself.

The glad Commencement season brings with it also a tinge of sorrow, as schoolmate is called upon to part from schoolmate. The class of '94 contains members of the Normal who have been active contributors to the pleasures of our school life. Many of us have personal friends in that body, from whom, although we are glad of their success, we shall part with reluctance.

It is a good class, and will join the ranks of our present alumni with honor to the school from which they were graduated. We sincerely hope each will find a well merited place of honor in the world. M.

College Honor.

HAVE we made the standard for our code of college honor too high, or is it too low? The recent imprisonment of one of the students of Cornell University because he persistently refused to answer questions in regard to the poisoning case, which might implicate some of his friends, has been instrumental in bringing this question directly before the college world, and has shown how great stress, we as students lay on college honor.

There is in every institution, no matter whether public school or university, an unwritten code of honor, which makes it impossible for the student who respects its teachings to report any misdemeanor committed by a fellow student, and so thoroughly is this recognized among students, that the one who has acquired the unfortunate habit of tale-bearing soon finds himself disliked and distrusted not only by the students, but by the faculty as well.

There are many arguments to be drawn on the side of the student who refuses to report. He has been educated along a certain line of ethics which compels him to look with disgust upon anything that savors of tale-bearing. He feels that he is not only lowering his own standard of honor but that of the school in relating a misdemeanor, and last but not least, he dislikes to do anything which may prove instrumental in bringing trouble upon his friends.

In this there is no harm. One can not help but entertain a feeling of respect for the student who would shield his friends through such motives. But this should not be carried too far. A sharp line should be drawn, between a misdemeanor and a crime and at that point should all attempts to conceal wrong-doing cease.

When college jokes are practiced to such an extent that they violate the statute law, and are an outrage upon common sense and decency, then should the perpertrators be surrendered to the ruling powers without regard for any cherished code of honor, and whatever punishment they deserve should be meted out to them. In fact, the honor of the student requires that this should be done. His failure to comply with this plainly demonstrates that he upholds the perpetrators of the crime.

Let us cherish our code of honor if we must, but let us see to it that it is founded upon principles of justice, and not upon a mistaken sense of honor. P.

Not Behind in Improving.

WE have not spoken at any length of the improvements that have or are being made in our school. We have not neglected speaking of this important matter from any lack of interest, but have been waiting to have the plans well formulated that we might speak of them with surety.

The appropriation which through the untiring efforts of our school management was secured last year, has been carefully used, and has added much to the convenience as well as the pleasantness of the building and surroundings, and especially in fitting up and enlarging special departments,

The walls of the rooms of the old part of the building were neatly papered and kalsomined. The normal room was cut into two rooms, one being equipped for an instrumental music room and the other nicely furnished for the Alpha Delta society and Christian Association room. A vocal music room was also fitted up adjoining this room. The apparatus newly purchased by the Fredonia Athletic Association and placed in our school gymnaseum room was secured and recently a piano added. These rooms are large and well equipped, and lack in nothing for our athletic work.

But the chief improvements have been made in our Science department, in fitting up our labratory and microscopic rooms. We do not hesitate to say that we have one of the finest labratories of any school of the kind in New York State, and while it is not so elaborate as some of our medical institutions, in its general arangement it is not surpassed. The tables are furnished with all necessary apparratus for chemical work, with racks on which are bottles containing the chemicals, arranged in alphabetical order. There is a water sink and faucet for each four tables, and also an oven in which to generate poisonous gases. Ample room for smaller glassware and apparatus used is furnished by drawers in the tables. A side room contains the chemicals kept in supply, with balances and other apparatus, and side tables are conveniently arranged with needed solutions. The work of improvement is not finished in this department but will continue during vacation so that another year will find all in readiness.

The former labratory room has been furnished with suitable tables and will be used for microscopic and geological work Now with these improvements, this department of the Fredonia Normal School is not behind any other school of its rank in New York state. Prof. Jewett may well be congratulated in his department.

Of the other improvements to be made we cannot speak with exactness as yet, but Dr. Palmer informs us that several hundred dollars will be used in purchasing suitable books for our libraries. These books to be carefully selected and added to from time to time.

LITERARY.

The Prisoner's Lament.

The sunset so golden and tender
Now burns its last flame in the west,
And edges with roseate splendor
The clouds that so peacefully rest,
On the summits of far-distant mountains,
That shadow low valleys between,
Where nestle sweet homes by the fountains
That flow from deep forests of green.

Fair scene! Yet how bitter the anguish
Its loveliness brings to my heart,
When prison-bars doom me to languish,
From nature and friendship apart;
Where no smile from without cheers my sorrow,
Save the sunbeams that cross the bare floor,
And even this blessing, so narrow,
The dark hated bars checker o'er.

Here an age seems each torturing hour,
And thought overburdens my brain,
Till at time I am conscious its power
Is yielding to madness and pain.
How long will the frame thus endure?
Will reason at last lose its sway?
Let it be, so the mind but secure
Forgetfulness in its decay.

Judge Albion W. Tourgee.

CHAUTAUQUA county has had few citizens whose names are more widely known, or of whom she could be more justly proud than of Albion W. Tourgee.

He was born Williamsfield, Ohio,

May 2, 1838. His home is now in Mayville of this county.

When the war broke out in 1861, he was studying in Rochester University; but believing that his first duty was to his country he enlisted in the Union army, and served through the war, leaving a noble record as a soldier. He was twice wounded in battle and was held for four months a prisoner in the hands of the confederates.

After the war he settled at Greensboro, N. C. In politics he was a radical Republican, and as he took an active part in the process of reconstruction in his state, we may believe his own personal experience furnished him with many of the incidents narrated in "A Fool's Errand," and "Bricks without Straw."

He published a newspaper in Greensboro, and afterwards one in Philadelphia. He held the office of judge from 1868 to 1874.

For the last few years he has been busily engaged in literary pursuits. Of the books which he has written, "A Fool's Errand" is probably the most popular, above 150,000 copies of this work have been sold.

In this he has given us an exciting picture of life in the South at the close of the Rebellion, and with it an able discussion of the national policy towards the South and the southern policy towards the negro.

In "Bricks Without Straw" he deals with the same questions only more from the standpoint of the colored man.

In "Figs and Thistles" the author lays aside national affairs and gives us simply a story. The scene of the story is laid in Ohio. The hero is first introduced as a poor boy, living with his grandfather on a farm. Being driven away from this home by cruel treatment, he starts out with his dog and ever after fights out life's battles alone, steadily climbing, till we find him at length in the army, where he still advances from one position to another, till he wears the epaulets of a brigadier general. Then like General Garfield whose life the author makes this one resemble, he leaves the army to take a seat in congress where in the course of his term of office, he is beset by peculiar temptations, but in spite of the tremendous pressure brought to bear against him he still holds his integrity and comes through the trials unsullied in character. The plot of this story is good, the whole sentiment elevating, and the style remarkably pleasing.

"Buttons Inn" is a story the events of which are supposed to have occurred in Chautauqua county. The time is the early days of Mormanism. The narative is the simple account of every day life in this old haunted inn, covering a period of several years. In it are introduced many of the customs of early times mingled with much of interest concerning the origin of that strange sect, the Mormons.

Judge Tourgee's success as an author seems to be due, in a great measure, to his knowledge of human nature. He has been a careful student of men, and is enabled to paint character with consumate skill.

He shows us more of the type of character represented by the southern planter in the manner in which we see this individual pick of a tobacco leaf to ascertain the degree of perfection arrived at in the process of curing, than many writers would be able to show in a closely written chapter.

Although his powers of discription are not particularly noticeable Tourgee has the rare ability of giving a very natural appearance to the scene he brings before the reader, with saying seemingly little about it. What more do we need here than a general description of the principal character in "Button's Inn" has been given to furnish a comprehensive idea of the following scene? Ozro is killing a sheep in the barn. Dollie Button wishes to speak with him about some fish for tomorrow's dinner, but Ozro wishes to speak with Dollie about something of far more importance. The author prefaces the conversation with these words: "He picked a straw from the floor and began to bite off little pieces as he spoke. She leaned against the center post and pushed bits of rubbish from the edge of the floor with her foot. He watched the foot absently."

A great deal is shown of the character of Markham Churr as he trudges determinedly along the road leading from his grandlather's farm, followed by his only friend, a yellow stub tailed dog, as he starts out to win a place in the world.

Judge Tourgee is a master of irony, and when discussing the white man of the South and his dealing with the negro, he gives vent to his feelings in expressions of the keenest irony or the bitterest sarcasm.

In addition to the works above mentioned, he has written "An Appeal to Cæsar," "The Royal Gentleman," "Hot Ploughshares," and an extensive work on North Carolina law, and numberless short articles for different periodicals for which he is a regular contributor.

As a lecturer he ranks among the foremost on the American platform. He is a forcible speaker.

Although Judge Tourgee has written much on political matters, he is not what is known as a politician, but any one who has read his frank and honest declaration as to his position in the politics of this Congressional District, can readily see why he has not more frequently been offered the honor of office.

There has been talk in the west where he is better known and more fully appreciated, it is said, than even in this county, of putting him forward as a candidate for the Vice Presidency in '96. But whether or not he is ever elected to fill such an office or even to represent this district in Congress, he will live in the hearts of his countrymen as something far better, a champion of the weak and oppressed, and an advocate of pure politics, and sound government.

FRANK M. MARKHAM, '93.

The Value of the Study of Science.

SCHOOL work at the present time, is divided among four branches, language, mathematics, science and art. Of these the last may be regarded as a luxury, while the others are necessities in greater or less degree. Knowledge of the English language and of the concrete mathematics is a necessity to every one and to our credit as a nation we occupy a foremost position both with regard to low percentage of illiteracy and excellence of our common school system.

Of the three branches, language, mathematics and science it seems to many that science is the most important. It is the expounder of nature on which all depends. The study of science is the study of nature, which cannot be said of the other two, and nature, so it is said, must be our guide and master. The school system today, however, is viewed from two different standpoints, one as laying a solid foundation for future growth, the other as an especial training in special work, and because of the difference we have two classes of educational institutions exemplified on the one hand by the college and on the other by the university. Even however, with these differences of opinion both sides claim that science is fundamental in their plan.

And this is true. Especially will it be found in the broad educational system which aims at the development of a systematical whole, for nowhere in the catalogue of studies can one be found combining each of the others in so perfect a manner. The study of science includes the study of both literature and mathematics, for the scientific literature is the purest of the age and to quote our professor "Sciences are nothing if not mathematical." And so we see here the three combined as no other branch combines them. Further than this it will be found here, for science beyond all else is at the root of the great operations of the world. From the great railroad systems and manufacturies to the humble tiller of the soil, all are dependent upon nature of which science is the expounder and so rest on a solid basis of science.

With regard to that being a part of the other system all that has been said may be said over with emphasis. Nothing will fit one for a position better than a good knowledge of the branches of this entrancing subject. To be a lawyer one most know everything. to be a farmer chemistry is necessary. For the different departments of engineering chemistry, geology or physics will be required and so on through the list. Even in many cases a special education will follow one of these lines. For a business life it will add much pleasure as well as profit to be able to appreciate — fully appreciate — all one sees, for then one will know a good thing when one sees it and be able to detect fundamental fallacies in either construction or principles. Even at this age and at no great distance from this enlightened village of Fredonia, there is now in process of construction a prepetual motion machine.

Now putting these together should not we concede that science is the important branch in our education. Not of course should it be studied to the exclusion of language or mathematics, for they in their place are equally useful, but to the extent which its practical benefit seems to make necessary. To carry out this study many will think it will take more time than is forthcoming during our school life. But before we say this let us see that not one moment of our time is going to waste or if the things on which it is spent are useful or essential. If they are they should be the subject of our best energies but if not, much which is, claims our attention. We are at school to prepare for our life work. No matter what it is or what means we take to prepare for it our time is precious, and the most precious part is rapidly passing by. If it is not realized it is more than time and money thrown away. If it is not realized to advantage, it is as bad and so our energies must be set in a direction where they will do us the most good. Science furnishes us such a field and claims the attention of all.

The Richardson Memorial.

TO THE ALUMNI OF THE FREDONIA STATE NORMAL SCHOOL.

A DESIRE to make some appropriate testimonial to the memory of Miss Elizabeth Richardson has been very generally expressed among the Alumni. The question what form it should take has received much discussion and has reached a definite answer. In Miss Richardson's response to a toast at the last Commencement, she strongly urged upon the Alumni that, if any effort were made to commemorate the 25th anniversary of the founding of this school, nothing could be so suitable or valuable as an Alumni library. Those present will well remember the earnestness with which this plea was made. The same thought has often been expressed to her friends. The fact that such was her well known and urgent desire, seems to determine the form of memorial best fitted to represent our appreciation of her character and life work. Whatever funds are contributed will be used in securing a large portrait of Miss Richardson to be hung in the school reception room, and in the purchase of a library known as the Richardson Memorial Library. The following committee has been named by the faculty and the executive committee of the Alumni to carry out this plan:—Miss Annie McLaury, T. C. Burgess, Dr. F. B. Palmer, Miss Julia Shepherd, Miss Edith Curtis, Miss Hattie Ely, Dr. A. W. Dods. The sum of one dollar has been fixed upon as the regular contribution but if any one desires to give a greater or a less amount, it will be gladly received. Money should be sent as soon as convenient to T. C. Burgess, Fredonia, N. Y.

The receipt of this circular letter should be considered your invitation to contribute.

Miss Kate H. Pier, of Milwaukee, was recently admitted to practice before the United States supreme court. In 1886 Miss Pier and her mother entered the law department of the University of Wisconsin, and by hard work were both able to graduate the following year. Miss Pier's efforts were largely instrumental in carrying through the legislature the bill which made it possible for her mother to be appointed court commissioner. Her father, Colonel C. K. Pier, and her two sisters are also attorneys.

Orton E. Douglas.

DEATH has come very close to our school in the removal from our number of our schoolmate and friend, Orton E. Douglas. He died at his home in this village, Sunday morning, May 20, 1894, at the early age of a little less than eighteen years.

School ties bind us very closely, and as we recall the thought that one of our own circle has gone out from us forever, our pen fails us, and there comes only the memory of the place he held in our hearts. Both faculty and pupils had learned to esteem and respect him.

His life was as unobtrusive as his purposes were steadfast, as his daily example was upright, as his friendship was true. There was an undercurrent of manly firmness in his every act, a depth of true principle in every word he uttered, ever enterprising, ever industrious, ever eager for honorable advancement, zealous in his school work and untiring in his desire to make his career a worthy one, his future promised nothing but success. But it was God's will that he should be taken away and he turned away from life, leaving behind sorrowing hearts to mourn his early death.

The funeral was attended largely by the school, Dr. Palmer preached the funeral sermon. The Zetesian society of which he was an efficient secretary, and the Agonian society of which his sister, Miss Lulu Douglas was a member, attended in a body.

Resolutions of Respect.

AT a special meeting of the Zetesian society held May 22, 1894, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, in view of the sad loss we have sustained by the decease of our fellow member and associate, Orton E. Douglas, and of the still heavier loss sustained by those who were nearest and dearest to him, therefore be it

Resolved, that it is but a just tribute to the memory of the departed to say that in regretting his sudden removal from our midst we mourn for one who was in every way worthy of our highest respect and regard, and be it

Resolved, that we most sincerely condole with the family of the deceased in the dispensation with which it has pleased Divine Providence to afflict them, and commend them for consolation to him who orders all things for the best and whose chastisements are meant in mercy, and be it fu ther

Resolved, that this heartfelt testimony of our sympathy and sorrow be presented to the family of our departed friend by the secretary of this meeting, and that these resolutions be published in the village papers and the Normal LEADER.

Whereas, God in his all wise providence has afflicted our dear Agonian sister, by the sudden and early death of her brother, Orton E. Douglas. Be it

Resolved, that we mourn in his death the loss of a valued friend and respected schoolmate, and that we tender to the bereaved parents and sister our sincerest sympathy and mutual sorrow. Be it furthermore

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and that they be printed in the Normal LEADER.

Mr. R. L. Campbell has accepted a position in Illinois for the coming year.

Miss Irma Campbell was elected president of the Y. W. C. A. at their election.

Miss Ella Wells spent last Friday and Saturday with her cousin in Westfield.

At their last meeting the Alpha Delta Society was favored with a talk by Dr. Palmer.

Mr. Crego has been suffering for the past week from an inconvenient bullet wound in his knee.

Miss Bertha Goodrich entertained the sewing circle very pleasantly at her home last Saturday afternoon.

Miss Laura Sheldon read a very interesting and instructive paper at the Chautauqua County Teacher's Association.

Miss Isbell and Miss Bickers entertained their Agonian friends in the Normal school reception rooms, Friday evening, May 11.

Among those who visited Fredonia on Friday and Saturday, May 18 and 19 to attend the Chautauqua county Teacher's Association we were glad to notice so many Alumni friends among whom were Prin. Anderson of Forestville, Prin. Hanley of Brocton, Prof Marshall of Frewsburg, Miss Laura Sheldon of Jamestown, Miss May Sawin of Ripley, Miss Waldorf of Sherman and Miss Lura Sheldon of Sherman.

CHAUTAUQUA COUNTY NY HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Mr. Holcomb enjoyably spent a few days at home last week.

Honor is appreciable to the worthy and they should have it. Make yourself worthy.

The funeral of Orton E. Douglas who died at his home May 20 of appendicitis, was largely attended last Tuesday afternoon.

Among the pleasant and instructive features of the Association was an able scientific discussion on the effects of alcohol upon the human system given Friday evening.

Drive your business. Let not that drive you. Every Student in school should have a little time daily to do some work or to look up some questions not concerned with the daily recitation.

The Alpha Delta society deserves great credit for the course just completed. The speeches and subjects have been well selected. It was a great pleasure to renew our acquaintance with Dr. Lord, and Prof. Gilmore, who did such excellent work in their lectures before the Agonian society. Prof. Dana is delightful as a lecturer, and our new friends, Mr. Howland, and Rev. Mr. Slicer were greatly enjoyed. The lecture course has been an opportunity for intellectual culture that has been improved by many and lost by many. It is ardently hoped by those who have the interests of the school at heart, that the educational lecture course will become a feature of the school, and that many more, especially of the students will be helped by it.

The Alumni are planning a testimonial to the memory of Miss Richardson. The letter printed on page 21 of this issue has been sent to each member of the Alumni Association.

NEVER FAIL TO CURE.

Two Sterling Household Remedies Which Sell Rapidly and Afford Highest Satisfaction to All.

Golden Relief and Cough Honey, Dr. M. M. Fenner, Fredonia, N. Y.

Editorial Correspondence.

In endorsing these wonderfully successful remedies to the drug trade throughout the country and commending them to every reader of the JOURNAL in the strongest terms we act advisedly, having just completed a thorough and painstaking examination of their claims and their merits. As a result of such investigation we do not hesitate to say that they should have a place in every family medicine closet, and the druggist who would keep abreast of the times must anticipate a demand which if he does not meet will be filled by some more enterprising competitor.

Some remedies gain recognition and popularity from force of inherent worth and thus, unquestionably, is true of each of these. Wherever they have been used they have gained golden opinions, and received enthusiastic praise from a class of people little given to vaunting the virtues of any proprietary medicine. In fact stronger evidence of efficacy and worth could not be required than the volumes of spontaneous testimony gladly tendered by those of intelligence and highest standing.

For these reasons we recommend these remedies to every reader and advise druggists who do not handle them to at once place them in stock. They are invaluable to every household and must be regarded as not only specifics, but as also a staple which the first-class drug-store must have upon its shelves. They are quick sellers, always give satisfaction, and every sale makes a friend or gains a customer

You feel a lack of spirit and energy may be you have "the blues." You are irritable, lack your usual ambition. Don't sleep well, nor, per chance, eat well. Headachy, drowsy, "tired," unrestful, sore, lame, dyspeptic. Constipation or diarrhoea may be. Sallow, moth, numbness, dizziness, bad breath. One or all of these. You are bilious. Your liver is torpid. Your nerves are "broken up." You are oppressed with the presence of half worn out material both in blood and nerves that need to be moved out, to give place to renewal that the fire of life may burn. You suffer from a general torpidity, or irritability, or both.

Dr. Fenner's Blood and Liver Remedy and Nerve Tonic never fails in these cases. It is as certain as the law of gravitation. Besides it is guaranteed. If not satisfied you get your money back. It don't cost much to try it.

and numerous other styles for all purposes and all hands, can be had from dealers in stationery.

It is only by the use of the best pens that satisfactory results can be had, therefore teachers and all persons preparing to teach are interested in useing and recommending Gillott's Pens.

They are most durable and save time to both teachers and pupils by permitting the most rapid progress to be made, therefore they are, in the end the cheapest pens made.
