London. Sept. 24. 1894

My dear Mr. Tourjée,

Your kind note has just been received many thousand miles away from home. I am so glad to hear from you again, and trust that a longer letter will soon follow your note. We sail for home the day after tomorrow, on the Mobile of the Atlantic Transport line, but as the ship is a slow one, it is likely that you will receive this before we are in sight of land.

I am glad to know that you received my cards. Please remember me kindly to your wife and daughter, and should any of you ever stray so far uptown as Harlem, be sure that you will receive a warm welcome both from me and from my dear husband.

Yours very Cordially
