My dear Miss Rivett: Your matter for the next number was received last night. It is excellent.

I send you to-day, the original of the Women Citizens Department, drawn by my daughter Aimée. We thought you might like to have it.

I send also the proof of the front-view half-tone. It is very statuesque and strong but not as dainty as the other. Aimée says it looks tired; and I am not ever she is such right. At first, I did not like it at all; but it grows on one and I fancy would be liked by many women better than the other. I say women because I do not think women like the things in each other that men prefer; though they agree with men as to what is most becoming in themselves. So I should expect you to violently prefer the [illegible].
