Dear wife: I have just had my promised interview with the Judge people. I was quite surprised to have it amount to nothing, but hardly for the statements made by Mr. Corbett. He said: We are going to eliminate the editorial page from politics.

We have just engaged a new editor. We considered your name in connection with that place. What we wanted, however, was not a thinker or a writer but a skilled editor to select

I would not pay five cents a column for the best matter that could be written to go into a picture paper.

Now, what should I do? I have tried everybody I can think of. Can you give me a suggestion?

I have a mind to write a letter today to Mr. Warner maker and see if he has such something I can do.

I had a sleepless night last night but wrote an article for the North American, which I will send you to be copied tonight.

I do not see any chance to do anything but write some articles on general subjects, scatter them here and there and in the meantime, go & renew acquaintances and get them ready as soon as I can. This, I can do as well and much better at home and infinitely less cost.

Do I think I shall better come home under
